BREAKFAST OF VISIONARIES Corporate Sponsorship Opportunities

Join Rick Steves, veteran travel host from NPR and PBS, and Global Visionaries for a morning of inspiring discussion of the role of travel on the lives of our future leaders. Never has a topic had more relevance than it has today, with business requiring — and national discussions urgently emphasizing — empathy, global citizenship, and inclusive leadership.

Last year's event sold out, so we have expanded both the venue size and the chance for influential companies and organizations to sponsor the event.

Eat, think, and...leave full.

THREE THINGS THAT SET GV APART

History shows that empowering young people to become leaders changes the world. We focus on enabling young people to become leaders and to change the world—creating a socially just and environmentally sustainable future. Global Visionaries makes that happen through a different kind youth development program.

What set our leadership program apart from others?

- 1) It's youth-led. Nothing develops leadership like the chance to lead. Each of our youth are given opportunities to lead, including being "leader of the day." Returning students become leaders of these burgeoning leaders—learning delegation and mentoring.
- 2) Our approach is holistic. GV features a progressive, multi-year program where leadership skills continue to advance. Our instructional programs for Greater Seattle educators incorporate many of the same learning objectives, positively impacting local schools.
- 3) We are deliberately diverse. True leadership develops most strongly when the leader must lead a diverse group of people. Students from all races and socio-economic classes meet and learn from each other. Difference is more than encouraged...it is required.

This level of true empathic leadership is only made possible through the inclusion of diversity. And, diversity is only possible if youth from lower-income families are included. That means we need to provide scholarships for 50% of our participants. And that is how your corporate group can help change the world!
